CURRICULAR CONNECTIONS
Seventeenth Century, Geography, Baroque Art, European Studies, Map Skills, World History, Arts and Humanities

CLASS PERIODS
45 minutes to 1 hour for introduction
1 week for collaborative team activities

CONCEPT
Throughout his life, Rubens traveled extensively as an artist and a diplomat. On his travels, Rubens came in contact with various cultures and witnessed several historical events. In this lesson, students will explore each of the cities in which Rubens either lived or visited. In doing so, students will discover the history and cultural environment that Rubens experienced while in each city. Collaborative student teams will create travel brochures for each of the cities.

OBJECTIVES
Students will use a map of Europe to record Rubens’s travels.
Students will work in collaborative teams.

Collaborative teams will research each city in which Rubens either lived or visited; each team will research a different city.
Collaborative teams will create a travel brochure on one of the cities in which Rubens either lived or visited.
Travel brochures will include a map; information on the location’s cultural, commercial, and religious centers; geographic features; weather conditions; and transportation routes as these existed in the year in which Rubens visited or lived in each place.

LESSON ACTIVITY

MATERIALS
Blank map of Europe
Transparency of map of Europe
Travel Brochure Information Sheet
Paper
Pencils
Internet access
Library resources for research
Sample travel brochures

TEACHER PREPARATION
1. Review background information on Rubens.
2. Print black line master of European map for students (p. 5).
3. Download and/or print transparency of European map for class use.
4. Print Travel Brochure Information Sheet for students (p. 4).
5. Obtain sample travel brochures from your local travel agent.
CLASS PROCEDURE

1. Explain to students that they are going to learn about seventeenth-century European history and geography by mapping the travels of the artist Peter Paul Rubens.

2. Review with class the life of Rubens, highlighting the various locations in which he either lived or visited.

3. On the board, list these locations. (List provided at right.)

4. Pass out blank European map to class.

5. Using the map on an overhead projector or downloaded to PowerPoint presentation, work with class to locate all the cities in which Rubens either lived or visited. Ask students to find and mark these locations on their map.

6. With class, draw the path of Rubens’s travels on your map. Discuss with class that it was very unusual that a person during the seventeenth century would have traveled as much as Rubens did.

7. Discuss with students about what Rubens may have witnessed in each of the places he either lived or visited.

8. Break class up into seven collaborative teams.

9. Inform collaborative teams that they are now going to each research a city in which Rubens either lived or visited.

10. Explain to students that in order to explore further what Rubens experienced on his travels, we need to research each of the places he either lived or visited.

11. Using the Internet and library resources, each team will complete the Travel Brochure Information Sheet for the city they chose. Stress to students that their answers must reflect the year in which Rubens traveled to each city and not the modern day.

12. Once each team has completed their Travel Brochure Information Sheet—this may take a few class periods—explain to students that as a collaborative team they are going to create a travel brochure for the city they researched using the answers from their worksheet.

13. Using sample travel brochures as examples, encourage collaborative teams to use their imagination in the creation of their brochures. Students should be given at least three to four class periods for the creation of their brochure.

14. Instruct teams that all travel brochures must include a map, information on the location’s cultural, commercial, and religious centers, geographic features, weather conditions, and transportation routes as these existed in the year in which Rubens visited or lived in each place.

15. Upon completion of their travel brochures, each collaborative team will present their findings to the class.

RUBENS’S TRAVELS

1578 Cologne, Germany
1589 Antwerp, Southern Netherlands (now Belgium)
1600 Mantua, Italy
1602 Rome, Italy
1603 Madrid, Spain
1606 Genoa, Italy
1608 Antwerp, Southern Netherlands (now Belgium)
1621 Paris, France
1627 Amsterdam, Northern Netherlands
1627 Madrid, Spain
1629 London, England
1630 Antwerp, Southern Netherlands (now Belgium)

Team researching Antwerp and Madrid should decide for which time period they would like to create their travel brochure. If you have a large class, more than one team may want to research these cities.
